

DIED IN ITS MOTHER'S ARMS.

Mrs. Smith's Child Expired While She Was Waiting for Aid.

She Takes the Body to the Coroner's Office Wrapped in a Shawl.

A pitiful scene was witnessed in the Coroner's office in Brooklyn this morning. Mrs. Mary Smith, thirty-five years old, of 15 Sycamore street, walked into the office with a dead baby in her arms. The little form was scarcely dead, and the heart-broken mother had thrown her shawl around it to screen the face from the gaze of strangers. The baby was a tiny frame of skin and bones.

Mrs. Smith told Deputy Coroner Deegan that her child died in her arms at 7:30 o'clock this morning. The little fellow was only seven months old. She had walked all night to get to the Coroner's office, and she had been waiting for an hour before she could get to the Coroner's office.

Her child had been suffering from asthma, and she feared he was going to die. She had called a doctor, but he reached at 7 o'clock, but the place had been so crowded that she could not get to the doctor's side. She had then called a nurse, but she had died before she could get to the nurse's side.

Mrs. Smith said her husband had been sent to the penitentiary a year ago to serve a term for larceny. She had been left alone with the child, and she had been so worried that she had not been able to get to the doctor's side.

Deegan offered her money to bury her child, but she refused to accept it. An undertaker was then called, and in an hour or so a couple of burly fellows arrived with a rough pine box.

Mrs. Smith in the mean time had been crying bitterly, and when the men took her child from her arms, she took the box she became almost frantic with grief. After the lid had been screwed down over the child, she took the box and walked away.

Early Monday evening the men met in the yard in the rear of their homes and began to quarrel. Both were drunk. They showed each other around the yard and exchanged blows.

Keenan, who was stronger, knocked Armstrong down, and the latter fell down the cellar steps, a distance of fifteen feet. When Armstrong reached the yard again he renewed his attack, and Keenan sent him to the ground once more.

While he was lying helpless, he says, Keenan kicked him savagely in the side, and he was unable to get up. Keenan was arrested at the time, and locked up in a charge of intoxication. He was released on Monday morning.

In the mean time Armstrong has been confined to his bed. Shortly after midnight, he died. He was about thirty years old. He had been suffering from asthma, and he had been so worried that he had not been able to get to the doctor's side.

The Coroner's office was crowded with people, and the body was taken to the Coroner's office wrapped in a shawl.

TO PUNISH THE ASSESSORS. ARE THEY BOTH LOST?

Charged with Not Heeding a Writ of Certiorari.

Papers in the Case Against Them Held to Be in Error.

A motion was made in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, this morning to punish the Board of Assessors of Brooklyn for contempt. It was claimed that no attention was paid to a writ of certiorari issued by Justice Cullen to review the proceedings of the Board.

The writ was obtained by Mrs. Mary A. Roby. Mrs. Roby claimed that the assessment of $3400 levied on her property at 18 Ralph avenue was too great. She says that $300 would be about right.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Gilbert appeared for the assessors. He said that the moving papers in the case were in error in that they were made out against the Board of Assessors as a body instead of against the individual members of the Board.

Justice Bartlett so held, and Counselor Campbell, for the plaintiff, was granted the privilege of presenting a brief in the matter.

MR. BATTIN DIED OF CYSTITIS.

The Aged Philanthropist Had Not Tasted Food for Weeks.

The Disposal of His Large Fortune Still a Mystery.

The secret surrounding the death of Joseph Battin, the wealthy citizen of Elizabeth, N. J., who died early yesterday morning at the Berachah Home for Rest and Healing, 20 West Forty-fourth street, was broken today by Dr. A. Saunders, of 20 West Forty-fourth street, who attended the old gentleman. It was stated that the immediate cause of his death was old age.

It was also rumored that the greater part of his fortune had been given by him to his charities.

At the Berachah Home any information regarding the philanthropist's death was in a manner refused. After ignorance was professed as to who the attending physician was, and the reports that generous gifts had been given to the Christian Alliance would neither be affirmed nor denied.

An Evening World reporter called at the Berachah Home, and inquired for Rev. Henry Wilson, pastor of the Berachah Chapel, Rev. Mr. Funk, associate pastor, or Rev. A. M. Simpson, pastor of the Eighth Avenue Gospel Tabernacle, he was told that they were all out of town.

The attendants in the chapel, which is connected with the home, refused to state when the pastor would return, or when they did say, however, that the physician that attended Mr. Battin was Dr. Saunders.

Dr. Saunders was found at his home, 20 West Forty-fourth street, when he was called by Mr. Battin. He said he saw no reason for the secrecy shown in his case, but he declined to say more.

Mr. Battin was eighty-seven years old. He was a native of Pennsylvania, and he had been in the United States for many years. He was a philanthropist, and he had given large sums of money to various charities.

GLADSTONE ON HOME RULE.

Grand Old Man Speaks in Parliament for Ireland.

A Decisive Vote on the Measure Friday Night.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—The last stage of the Home Rule bill debate in the House of Commons began today at noon. The exceptionally large attendance showed that the majority of the members who went to the country for their holidays had returned to hear the final speeches of the party leaders and to take part in the final division on next Friday night.

On the Irish benches hardly a seat was vacant. The Liberals and Radicals were present almost to a man. All the party leaders were present as they entered, but no great enthusiasm was shown until Mr. Gladstone and John Morley came in together. Then the Irish members rose, the Liberals and Radicals joined them, and for nearly two minutes the House rang with shouts.

Before Mr. Gladstone rose to move the third reading a few amendments were added to the bill at the instance of Mr. Morley, Chief Secretary for Ireland. After they had been disposed of without debate Mr. Gladstone rose and a storm of applause greeted his appearance. With reference to the difficulties made by Colonel leaders on the historical precedents he had cited on former occasions for Home Rule in Ireland.

The opposition, he said, had contended that in no other countries could analogies be found for changing the union between Great Britain and Ireland. Their contention could not be supported by historical facts. In Austria-Hungary, in Norway and Sweden, in the United States and in the British colonies there were to be found the abundant proofs that it was altogether desirable to separate local from internal affairs.

Throughout European and American literature it was not possible to find a writer entitled to consideration who approved of the conduct of England towards Ireland or attempted to apologize for the grievous and shameful history which, since the union, they had left behind.

IS HE M. B. EVANS?

Man Struck and Instantly Killed by an Erie Train.

The body of a man about twenty-seven years old, five feet seven inches tall, is awaiting identification in Gray's undertaking establishment, 353 Grove street, Jersey City, he having been struck and instantly killed by an east-bound passenger train at the Brunswick street crossing of the Erie Railroad in Jersey City last night.

The dead man, who had sandy hair and was smoothly shaven, was nearly dressed in a blue coat and vest, brown trousers, with black and white lace shoes, white shirt and undergarments, and a white waist with an electric belt.

Among other effects was a badge, on which was inscribed "M. B. Evans, 122, Brooklyn," also a map of Bogart Heights, Garfield, Bergen County, N. J., and a letter from a woman, who was written in the Hebrew language.

THIRD CHOLERA SUSPECT DEAD.

Dr. Cooney Says He Thinks Crowe Had Severe Cholera Morbus.

The third of Jersey City's suspected cholera cases has proven fatal. Martin Crowe, an attaché of the Jersey City Hospital, who was stricken on Monday night, died shortly after midnight. His body was buried early this morning by order of Health Inspector Benjamin M. Potter's field. The body of Mrs. Josephine Smith, who died of suspected cholera in the hospital yesterday morning, was buried in Potter's field in the afternoon.

Crowe attended Mrs. Smith, and it is suspected that he caught the malady from her. Dr. John T. Cooney, the House Surgeon, says he thinks Crowe, Mrs. Smith and her brother-in-law, William Smith, who died of cholera, had inflammation of the colon, a part of the intestines.

This is a disease, the doctor says, which is very similar to the Asiatic cholera. It is a slight suspicion of Asiatic cholera, said Dr. Cooney, "we take as great precaution as though we were dealing with Asiatic cholera. These cases are cholera morbus in its most fatal form. Both the patients who died, Mrs. Smith and Martin Crowe, had been in the hospital for several days, and their sickness may be traced, an indulgence in fruit. They had not the protection of a nurse, as is usual in cases of Asiatic cholera."

Mrs. Smith said that Morton, who was in her house, had been indulging freely in fruit, and may have a microscopical examination of the stool, which would prove beyond question that the sickness was cholera. Physician Cooney and Martin Crowe's relatives agreed with me in their opinions of these cases.

The quarantine on Morton's house, No. 3 State street, and the three neighbors, and the quarantine of the street, having refused an injunction restraining the city from paying its share of the cost.

The Legislature authorized the city to pay a sum not exceeding $7500 towards raising the New York Central tracks and widening the street at the intersection of One Hundred and Sixth street to the Harlem River, made necessary by the elevation of the new railroad bridge across the Harlem at Park avenue.
